FIREMAN MYER HURT AT CLIFTON AVENUE BLAZE

Finland Ends Soviet Parley

Delegation Says No Quarter Given

Britain, France Say War Aims Are Restoration of Poland, Austria, Czechoslovakia

(By The Associated Press)
The Finnish foreign office announced today that its delegation in Moscow would leave for home tonight, suspending the lengthy negotiations by which Russia has been seeking concessions from Finland.

The foreign office announcement was made shortly after 2 p. m., (8 a. m., E. S. T.).

Previously Foreign Minister Eljas Eriko had said that only "last minute" modification of Soviet demands for territorial concessions could prevent recall of the Finns from Moscow.

The negotiations were initiated October 7 after Russia had won concessions from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, strengthening her military position in the west and north.

Exchange of Notes
Moscow discussions of the Russian demands in the past five days had consisted of an exchange of notes on minor points.

The returning delegation is scheduled to arrive in Helsinki Wednesday. It had been given authority to return whenever there appeared to be no hope of further progress.

Finance Minister Vaino Tanner early this afternoon advised the foreign office of the decision to return.

Britain and France today indicated their war aims against Germany called for restoration of Poland, Czechoslovakia and Austria—the three states which have fallen before German expansion.

This indication came in British and French replies to the mediation offer from Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians.

France stated unequivocally that "the injustices imposed on the three small nations must be rectified before peace could be established."

Allies' Aims
The British reply, outlining allies' war aims in broader terms, was interpreted by authoritative London sources as meaning the same thing.

Such terms from the Allies seemed to leave scant hope the Netherlands-Belgian mediation offer would meet with success at present. Adolf Hitler repeatedly has stated that restoration of Poland could not be considered.

German political quarters in Berlin accused Britain and France of "deliberately" sabotaging the mediation offer.

The foreign ministers of the two lowland countries met near their common frontier last night, possibly to consider the next step in the light of the replies from London and Paris.

Premier Dirk Jan de Geer told the Netherlands in a radio speech that there was no ground for "uneasiness" and discounted reports the nation was in danger of foreign invasion.

He attributed the reports to belligerents in the European war who, he said, credit one another with the darkest plans.

Though there was no important military action on the Western front, air-raid warnings sent the civilian population of Paris to cover for the seventh time since war started. Military sources said German scouting planes had flown over the Paris area.

A month of tense diplomatic negotiations between Soviet Russia and Finland resulted in a deadlock over Russian demands for territorial concessions.

Keeps up Attack
The Soviet press kept up an attack against what it termed Finnish "obstinacy" while Finns indicated that only last-minute modification of the Soviet demands could keep the parleys in Moscow from breaking down.

Russian particularly wants a naval base on the Finnish side of the Gulf of Finland and territorial concessions to protect Murmansk, Russia's only ice-free port on the Arctic.

A result of the European war became apparent in the Far East as Britain and France informed Japan they were withdrawing part of their troops from North China and would keep only sufficient forces to "preserve order."

Such a reduction in the number of foreign military forces has been one of Japan's aims in her campaign to solidify control of occupied Chinese territory.

40,000 Troops Start Training

Five Infantry Divisions, One Cavalry and Auxiliary Units Will Receive Four Months of Field Soldierly in South and Northwest

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—Buglers at nine scattered army posts in the south and northwest signaled today the full start of mass training by 40,000 troops to provide the nation's first sizable, unified fighting force since the World War.

Five "streamlined" infantry divisions, one cavalry division, and auxiliary units will be put through four months of field maneuvers ordered after President Roosevelt proclaimed a limited national emergency.

Intensified training of other regulars and of National Guardsmen is in full swing, in parallel moves to assure teamwork.

Three weeks were required to transport the mobilized regulars with their guns and supplies from their permanent stations, by rail, troopship and motor trucks. But at the week-end the mobilization was pronounced nearly complete. Movement of a few units will be delayed as long as February 1.

A pioneer anti-tank battalion will be among the new auxiliary units. Its 310 officers and men will handle 12 of the army's new 37 millimeter anti-tank guns.

The general staff expects that by March 15 the new smaller divisions of about 9,000 officers and men each will have been welded, by drill and war games, into fighting forces such as the United States never has had except in war.

Four of the infantry divisions then will concentrate at a central point, such as the DeSoto national forest in Mississippi or Fort Benning, Ga., for the first peacetime maneuvers as a corps.

When this training is finished, these divisions will return to their permanent stations, and four others, organized in the meantime, will be put through maneuvers.

If Congress provides the funds, the winter training will be given annually. If Congress increases army and National Guard strength to the total of 600,000, war department plans call for organization of nine army corps, each consisting of one regular division and two larger National Guard divisions.

Goddard to Hear Motions to Give Property Titles

U. S. District Judge to Get Answer to Show Cause Order on Sale of Factory Plant

A move will be made tomorrow before United States District Judge Henry W. Goddard in New York for release of the real property of William Schwarzwald & Company, Inc., and the substituting of the moneys derived from the sale of the property so that persons who bid in real property at the auction sale on October 28 may be given title free and clear to the property which they have bid in.

An order to show cause was made by Judge Goddard returnable Tuesday, which if granted after a hearing will allow the substitution of the moneys derived from the sale to stand as security for payment of taxes and other liens in lieu of the real property. The order to show cause was signed on petition of Kaye, Scholer, Fierman and Hays, attorneys for debtors in reorganization and is directed to the town of Shandaken, county of Ulster and mortgagees. Taxes in the sum of some $12,000 are a first lien.

British-Bound Bombers Sink in New York Harbor

This was the scene at a Staten Island dock in New York harbor as the derrick on the left attempted to lift two dismantled Lockheed bombers (center) from the water after the barge on which they were awaiting shipment to England mysteriously capsized and sank. One corner of the sunken barge sticks above the water (left center) and its derrick and engine house are only partly submerged (right). Police said a preliminary investigation turned up no evidence of sabotage. Barge company officials attempted to raise the craft in an effort to learn what caused it to sink. The bombers apparently were not seriously damaged.

Tribute Is Paid To Late Dr. Ellis

By Local Church

Presbyterians of Rondout Hold 106th Anniversary Services at Church Sunday Morning

Tribute was paid Sunday to the memory of the late Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis at the 106th anniversary and memorial services held in the Rondout Presbyterian Church, where he had served as pastor for 30 years. The memorial sermon was preached by the Rev. Oliver W. Chapin, pastor of the Margaretville Presbyterian Church, a close friend of Dr. Ellis.

The Rondout Presbyterian Church was the first church established in Rondout, and was organized on November 1, 1833. The 106th anniversary of the church's founding will also be celebrated on Tuesday and Wednesday when the annual church fair and turkey dinner will be held in the chapel.

The Rev. Mr. Chapin took as his theme "The Mantle of a Godly Man" and traced briefly the early life of Dr. Ellis and of his work as pastor of the church, which he served from 1901 until 1931. He wondered which man posterity would remember; the man whose inscription was on a tombstone in the cemetery at Margaretville and what that inscription read; the man of whose death they had read in the newspapers at the time, or the man who was remembered by the congregation in his daily walk of life and his ministry.

Dr. Ellis, he said, wore the mantle of Christian loyalty and the mantle of Christian service, and he devoted his sermon to elaborating on those two points. It was the work of those who had long since passed on who had handed down the torch of Christianity for the present generation to carry on.

During the more than quarter century that Dr. Ellis had served the church he had been brought into close contact with its members. Many of those present in the congregation had been blessed by the life and devotion of Dr. Ellis as pastor. He had united many of them in marriage and had baptized their children and had brought many of them into the membership of the church.

Whether posterity would remember Dr. Ellis by the words on his tomb depended upon whether the people of the church wear the mantle he left them. That church can be an eternal monument to his memory.

"Dr. Ellis," he said, "being dead, yet speaks through me: This is my mantle, take it and wear it worthily of the king to whom it belongs."

During the services the choir sang a special musical program.

The church which is celebrating its 106th anniversary was organized on November 1, 1833, and the cornerstone of the present church was laid on June 4, 1873. The church was organized 106 years ago.

City Man and Four Hunters Feared Drowned in River

Earl Loudenslager, 25, Is Member of Party Which Police Believe Hunting for Ducks

Grapplers Busy

Men Are Thought Lost Off Catskill; Camp Is Found by Searchers

Grappling in the Hudson river since 6 o'clock this morning, Greene county authorities at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon had been unable to locate the body of Earl Loudenslager of 25 Charlotte street, this city, who with four companions was thought to have been drowned off Catskill while duck hunting on Saturday.

Mr. Loudenslager, who was a dental supply salesman, and his four companions had pitched camp along the shore of the Hudson river, near Catskill, while planning spending some time shooting ducks on the river.

The four companions of Mr. Loudenslager were Dr. John F. Redmond, William Rieley and James F. Rowe, all of Catskill, and Dr. Samuel Herron, a dentist of Stamford.

Grappling Goes On
Starting at 6 o'clock this morning Sheriff Milton Bailey and Undersheriff Clarence Palmer of Greene county, state police and members of the state conservation department, started the work of grappling for the bodies of the five men who are supposed to have been drowned. Four motor boats of the conservation department had been pressed into service in the search for the missing men.

According to word received at Kingston police headquarters the five men had gone out on the river in a rowboat about a mile south of Catskill. Sunday the capsized rowboat was found floating in the river about a quarter of a mile north of the Rip Van Winkle bridge.

Finding of the rowboat led the Greene county authorities to start the search as they were informed that the men had been heard calling for help on the river.

Wife Receives Call
First intimation that Mr. Loudenslager and his companions were missing was received in Kingston when Mrs. Loudenslager received a telephone call from Mrs. Redmond, wife of one of the missing men, from Catskill, advising her of the fact that her husband and four others were reported missing. Mrs. Herron of Stamford was staying with Mrs. Loudenslager while their husbands were away.

After receiving the telephone call from Catskill the two women called police headquarters here seeking transportation to Catskill but failing to make clear their call and two radio cars were sent to the house.

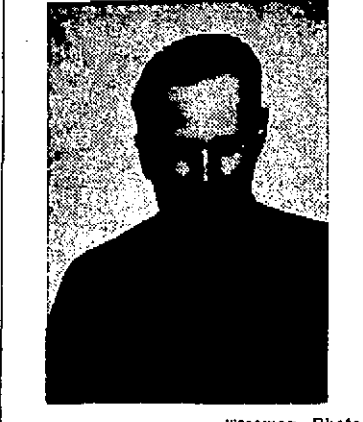

However, the police were not able to drive the women to Catskill and the assistance of a neighbor was obtained who made the trip with them.

Three others who were sought returned to their homes after from five days to a month in the wilds, the Associated Press reports.

Two of the three who returned home yesterday and who had been unlocated more than a month were found in the woods near Lowville. The fair, Richard Holdberg, 47, and Thomas McElroy, 15, members of prominent Peekskill families, had spent the time camping, hunting and trapping.

Ronald Terry, 30, of Elmira, was the third. Lost five days in the snow-laden Adirondacks near (Continued on Page Five)

City's Outskirts To Receive Mail Carrier Delivery

Postmaster Announces New Plan Will Be Carried Out Thursday; Will Utilize Trucks

The outskirts of the city of Kingston, for the first time in postal history in the city, will receive letter carrier service commencing Thursday, through the efforts of Postmaster William R. Kraft.

For years Main street extension, Pearl street extension and other streets in that locality, and streets in the Richmond Park section of the city have been served mail service by rural carrier.

In an effort to improve mail delivery in the outlying sections of the city the postmaster for some time has been at work on a plan to have these sections served with regular carrier service.

This morning Postmaster Kraft when seen at his office in the Central Post Office building, said that the plans for regular mail service by carrier have finally been approved, and the service would start on Thursday.

These sections will be served with what is known as "mounted carrier" deliveries being made by auto truck. One of the present substitute carriers will be assigned to the service.

Rural Mail Carrier Edward Wortman, who has been serving these districts as part of his rural route, will now devote his entire time serving the West Hurley rural route. All deliveries on this rural route commencing Thursday will be made from the Central Post Office.

The postmaster said that this West Hurley rural route has now been absorbed by the Kingston post office department.

Roosevelt Has More Than 5,000 Federal Jobs to Fill; Most Are Postmasterships

Washington, Nov. 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt, with 14 months to go on his present term of office still has more than 5,000 federal jobs to fill.

Postmasterships make up the bulk of the prospective appointments, but a cabinet office, four important diplomatic posts, two circuit judgeships and other less important places are vacant.

Senate clerks expect 2,500 postmasters to be appointed when congress meets in January, and an equal number later in the session. Legislators who talked recently with the President came away with the impression that Mr. Roosevelt was in no hurry to appoint a new secretary of navy.

Charles Edison, assistant secretary has been acting navy chief since the death of Secretary Swanson several months ago. The President has kept in close touch with naval affairs, especially since the outbreak of the European war.

Diplomatic posts are vacant in Germany, Peru, Canada and Bulgaria. No indication has been given when new envoys will be chosen.

The resignation of Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, after his recall from Germany to report, left the Berlin post vacant. The transfer of Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt to Russia left a charge d'affaires handling United States interests in Peru.

The post of minister to Canada, filled only temporarily by Daniel Roper during the visit of Great Britain's king and queen, may be one of the first filled. The Bulgarian minister's place has remained unfilled since Ray Atherton was sent to Denmark.

Judgeships on the federal circuit courts are vacant in the first circuit, (Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Puerto Rico) and the fourth circuit (Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina).

There will be a vacancy on the interstate commerce commission with expiration December 31 of the term of Carroll Miller, Virginia-born utilities engineer.

Hicks' Residence Is Damaged Badly By Fire and Water

Painters' Blow Torch Said to Be Cause; Fire Chief Murphy Trapped in Attic by Smoke

Loss Is $8,000

Myer Is Hurt as His Ladder on Roof Slides From Under Him

Fireman Howard Myer, of the Kingston paid fire department, suffered a sprained right knee about 9:30 o'clock this morning when the residence of Ernest M. Hicks, 87 Clifton avenue, was damaged by fire.

A strong southwest wind fanned the flames and handicapped the firemen.

Fire officials said the blaze was caused when painters used a blow torch at the rear of the house. Mr. Hicks tentatively estimated the damage would be from $6,000 to $8,000.

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, the first fireman to arrive at the house after a telephone call had been received, was trapped by smoke in the attic of the house and forced to crawl on his hands and knees to find the attic stairs. The chief after arriving at the house found smoke pouring from the attic windows and rushed up into the attic seeking to locate the source of the fire.

Climbing Ladder
Fireman Myer was injured when climbing a ladder that had been placed on the roof of the front porch to reach the large dormer window in the attic in the front of the house. The porch roof was extremely slippery from water and the ladder slid, carrying Myer with it. The fireman landed on his back on the porch roof with the ladder on top of him.

Fireman Myer was rushed to the Kingston Hospital where his injuries were X-rayed. He was removed to his home.

Using Blow Torch
The contract to paint the house had been awarded to Clarence Cranket of Esopus avenue, a master painter, and his men had applied the first coat to the house and this morning were at work with a blow torch on the rear porch. The torch was being applied, according to the fire department, to baseboards on the outside of the house on the rear porch.

In some way sparks from the torch shot up between the exterior and interior house siding and burst out into the attic which was soon filled with heavy smoke and flames.

When the fire apparatus arrived three lines were stretched on the fire. Owing to low pressure the big pumper was used to increase the pressure on two of the hose lines.

Windows Are Bursted
The intense heat burst many of the windows in the house and in order to save the furniture as much as possible the firemen used canvas to protect the furniture which was piled in the center of each room and covered.

The fire was so hot that it was necessary to use the fire hose and considerable water was poured into the house to extinguish the fire.

The firemen also were forced to use axes to rip off part of the siding of the house to get at the fire between the partitions.

Most of the damage was caused by water and fire which ruined the interior of the house from the attic to the first floor.

News of the fire soon spread and the police department assigned two officers to handle traffic while the firemen were busy fighting the fire.

Bridge Collapses

McAllen, Tex., Nov. 13 (AP)—Sudden collapse of the International Bridge at the end of "the Nickle-plated Road-to-Hell" dumped nine persons into the Rio Grande last night. Francisco Delgado, 30, of Edinburg, Tex., was missing and feared drowned. Eight persons escaped drowning or being crushed to death in the wreckage. Two cars were plunged into the water as twin cables at each end of the bridge snapped. Firemen dragged the river for possible victims after hearing reports that others went down with the span.

Stocks Were Down Against Last Week

Although the stock market closed the week, before the Saturday holiday, with a slight advance, for the week as a whole losses were shown all along the line. Industrials made the poorest showing, those in the Dow-Jones list being off over three points for the week; rails were off 1.05 points from the preceding Saturday's close and utilities were down net .30 point.

The pace of business generally continued at a high level, with some lines at capacity production and such recession as is being shown of the seasonal order. Outside of the consideration that is being given to the possibility that industry is operating in some cases at too fast a pace and must inevitably slow down later, the chief factor in the market's action of late apparently has been the uncertainty regarding the foreign situation that there is a tendency for hostilities to cover a wider scope. It is noticeable that the market appears to be paying more attention to the course of the London and Amsterdam exchanges and weakness there has been followed by downward movements here. Then, too, there are signs that some attention is being paid to possibilities in Washington and the recent Eccles speech was taken as a sign that the New Deal was by no means dead and that for some men would do well to keep their armor handy in case of emergency.

There were wide fluctuations on the Amsterdam Bourse Saturday but nervousness over political factors eased toward the close and domestic issues gained up to seven points. There was particular demand for sugar, shipping and rubber stocks. There was liquidation in Royal Dutch which closed at 247½ against 249½ Friday.

The U. S. Treasury's gold stocks on November 8 totaled $17,131,523,667. Net imports of gold during October totaled $68,725,000, but this was a sharp reduction from September when imports were $326,074,000.

Some recent reports of net earnings by railroads show sharp improvement over a year ago. Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis had net of $474,435, or $1.85 a share for nine months ended September 30, net of $139,980 in the same period of 1938. The New York Central showed a net loss of $5,779,923 for the nine months, but their loss in the first nine months of 1938 was $21,433,123. Erie Railroad shows net loss for the period of $3,037,049 vs. loss year ago of $7,841,911; the road showed net income in September of $482,429.

Retail deliveries of Studebaker cars and trucks in October were largest for the month in the company's history. Chevrolet had October deliveries 40 per cent above October, 1938.

Prospects for settlement of the Chrysler strike dimmed as President Franklin D. Roosevelt renewed his demand for a closed shop.

Seattle, Nov. 13 (AP)—An earthquake described by University of Washington geologists as the heaviest in their seismicograph's records, rocked large areas of the Pacific northwest shortly before midnight. The seismograph registered the shock at 11:45 p. m. (2:48 a. m. Monday, E. S. T.). No one was hurt. Officials and business men in Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Van Couver, B. C. and other cities surveyed damage caused by the shock that lasted approximately one minute.

Estate of 50 Dollars

Philadelphia, Nov. 13 (AP)—Mayor S. Davis Wilson, who died last August, left an estate valued at $50. His will, written 11 years ago, left his estate to his widow, who fixed the value. Two weeks ago the mortgage on the house where the Wilsons lived was foreclosed and she moved to the home of a son.

New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—

Selective support crept into the stock market today but trends, for the most part, were indefinite. Prices were uneven at the opening, then a few steels, aircrafts, rails and specialties edged forward. There was a subsequent slip-up and near the final hour, minor declines were in the majority.

Dealings were inconsequential throughout, with transfers for the full session at the rate of approximately 700,000 shares.

Some forenoon buying was attributed to European dispatches indicating that, while international tension had been relaxed somewhat because of the failure of Germany to strike at the allies through Belgium and Holland, prospects of a nearby peace were cloudier than ever.

Domestic earnings and dividend news still was viewed as the principal market bulwark, but, with many industries now at or near a recovery peak, thought was given to a possible flattening out of the curve in the next several months.

Foreign securities markets were about steady. A sharp upturn in the British pound sterling in terms of the dollar aided sentiment. Bonds and commodities were a shade mixed.

Stocks up at one time or another — some eventually gave ground — were Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Montgomery Ward, Curtiss-Wright, Electric Boat, Standard Oil of N. J., Santa Fe, Great Northern, American Telephone and American Can.

Backward were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, U. S. Rubber, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse and Union Carbide. In arrears in the curb were Lockheed, Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid "B" and Lake Shore Mines.

BAKE BORN WITH TWO HEADS

"Coming along nicely," said Dr. J. C. Stutzer when he examined Jesse Lee Herron several days after removing an abnormal second head which protruded from the back of the baby's neck when he was born in a mountain cabin near Kingsport, Tenn. Dr. Stutzer is shown examining the three-weeks-old babe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Herron. The physician said he amputated the only slightly developed second head several days after the birth.

Jessel Would Produce

New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—George Jessel, radio and stage comedian, said today he and Ben Hecht, the writer, were forming a company to produce motion pictures in New York. Production, Jessel said, will start in about six weeks on a story written by Hecht, Jessel and Hecht, conferred for half an hour at city hall with Mayor LaGuardia who is campaigning to transplant a portion of the Hollywood industry to its original home in this city.

Held For Two Deaths

Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 13 (AP)—A mild-mannered, 32-year-old junkyard worker sat quietly in a jail cell today awaiting hearing on charges of slaying his two small children in a fit of despondency. Slashed with a razor and beaten with a hammer the children of Charles Ebert—Charles, Jr., three, and Shirley, six—died yesterday. Their mother was in critical condition from a fractured skull.

Spaghetti Consumption

Forty-five million Italians consumed more than 3,000,000,000 pounds of spaghetti in 1938, according to Agostino Agnesi, so-called spaghetti king of Italy. His factory turns out enough spaghetti every 48 hours to girdle the globe. Made solely of wheat flour, spaghetti has leaped into greater prominence in Italy than ham and eggs in America. Between 9,000 and 10,000 factories are turning out spaghetti at a mile-a-minute clip from the north to the south of Italy. Made of the hardest kerned wheat, Italian spaghetti claims more vitamin E content than any other food. Italian food experts have given it more than 100 different designs, with gastronomic appeal second to none in Italy.

Bartender Is Held For Shooting Wife, Woman Companion

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 13 (AP).—A 32-year-old bartender was held today in connection with the fatal shooting of his blonde cigarette girl wife and another woman in the lobby of the fashionable hotel (Tutwiler) where all three were employed.

Coroner G. M. Evans said murder charges were placed against Albert Dyer after Dorothy Shannon Dyer, 18, and Mrs. S. V. Lyemance, 29-year-old mother of two, were shot when the younger woman refused a reconciliation with her husband. The Dyers had been married two months.

Detective Henry Darnell reported Dyer, bartender in the cocktail room where his wife sold cigarettes, admitted he walked up to her early Sunday and shot her four times, then turned his revolver on Mrs. Lyemance because "I felt she was responsible for a lot of my trouble."

The detective said Mrs. Dyer had been living with Mrs. Lyemance after leaving her husband five days ago.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Drastring

Losing Game

Indianapolis—Crime didn't pay for the thief who broke into Mrs. Helen Hughes' automobile. He stole a 15-cent measuring tape. He left behind a good topcoat.

Smiling Service

Denver—Police twice chased a truck driver to tell him part of his load of hay was slipping off. Each time the driver thanked the officers and continued.

Then A. L. Alwood stepped from a restaurant and found his truck and hay gone. State Highway Patrolman Vern Kutz caught the driver north of town.

Osborne Repeats Venison Warning

Albany, Nov. 13, (Special).—With the deer hunting season in the Adirondacks now in progress and the Catskill and Southern Tier seasons scheduled to get under way later in the month, Conservation Commissioner Lithgow Osborne today called to the attention of sportsmen, provisions of the Conservation Law relating to the serving of venison and other non-salable game.

"To comply with this specific provision of the law," said Commissioner Osborne, "venison and other non-salable game must not be served as a part of a meal when a charge is made for the meal in any manner. Throughout the fall and winter months many fish and game clubs, sponsors of venison or game dinners and usually members of the club donate their 'take' of game. This, of course, is within the law provided there is no charge made for the dinner."

"Persons sponsoring or participating in such dinners and where a charge is made for the dinner, either directly or indirectly, are liable to prosecution under the Conservation Law. Restaurants, hotels, grills and taverns also come within the scope of the provision and must adhere to the law in its entirety. Co-operation of all sportsmen and the general public is requested by the department in living within the law."

Domestic game reared under state breeding laws, with proper tags and purchased legally, is considered legitimate fare at any dinner where a charge is made for it or not, Commissioner Osborne pointed out.

Bar Association Meeting

This evening at the Hotel Stuyvesant the Ulster County Bar Association will hold its dinner meeting. The meeting will be presided over by the president of the association, Andrew J. Cook. Featuring the meeting will be an address by Robert M. Benjamin, chairman of the New York state legislative committee on the quasi-judicial action of judicial agencies. He is being accompanied to Kingston by Francis Horan, counsel to that committee.

CALM YOUNG FACISTS

One trouble with dictators is, they don't know that enough is enough. William L. White, son of William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette, has recently gone to Europe, traveling on the Italian liner Rex. One piece of entertainment provided on shipboard was a news reel which was built around the idea that Mussolini is still the biggest news in Italy.

The Duce was shown in many active poses, leaping about, according to Mr. White, "limber as a gazelle and yet firm as a rock." The group being entertained by those pictures was composed chiefly of young Italians, wearing their Fascist insignia, apparently wholly loyal to Fascism.

That the audience did not clap seemed to Mr. White worthy of comment. He suggests a few reasons, such as that "clapping is undignified" and that "so much applause was provided by the sound track that more seemed unnecessary."

Other possibilities occur to the reader of young Bill White's piece about that voyage. Even thoroughgoing Fascists may grow weary of applauding the same hero for the same interminable demonstrations of his superior prowess. Aved admiration is a wearing emotion, and so is enthusiasm for some one who never admits making a mistake.

NEW WEALTH NEEDED

"We have spent too much time trying to distribute wealth when we don't have it," declares Walter B. Pitkin, journalist and researcher. "Let's create it first and worry about distribution later. The traitor to America is the man who refuses to create new wealth."

Generally speaking, Americans have not been making such refusals. They have been eager to create wealth. And that spirit has made the country great and rich. But riches, public and private, tend to filter away and disappear if they are not renewed. We cannot count on acquiring a lot of wealth and living on it. Wealth has to be continually replaced by new effort and production, or else we slide back and grow poor.

This is one of the reasons why it is important to keep middle-aged people at work, producing wealth, and why it is important not to adopt lavish, utopian pension schemes for elderly people who are not in need. The tendency in recent years is, generally speaking, to confine the burden of wealth-production to a period of only 25 or 30 years, say from the age of 20 or 25 to 45 or 50, covering less than half a lifetime.

We certainly have not yet reached the time when we can expect to support our population comfortably on any such basis.

SO FAR BUT NO FARTHER

The Nazi government and press are naturally jolted by repeal of the American arms embargo, which makes plenty of war materials available to European democracies. It can hardly have been surprised, however. Precedent and policy both pointed to this action.

It might be called a logical outcome of the policies pursued by the Nazi government. In spite of American reluctance to enter even by indirect and peaceful methods into the European struggle, sooner or later there was bound to be some practical working arrangement among the nations so seriously threatened by the autocracies. In a crisis, like-minded people tend inevitably to flock together.

Optimists hope that this mild and legitimate form of "participation in the war" will suffice, and the mere assurance of adequate war supplies and foodstuffs for the democracies will turn the tide and force an early peace. If this hope proves true, well and good. But it cannot be taken for granted. In spite of the obvious reluctance of both sides to plunge into a general war, a long and bitter struggle might develop.

In any case, it is important now that our people and government go no further than this passive aid to the democratic allies—that publicly and privately Americans let the world know we are determined not to be drawn actively into a foreign war. Both our political parties, and present and future government policy, should be steadfastly committed to a strong home defense, joined with a determination not to fight abroad.

THE SAD UN-POLLED

Americans, it appears, have a great suppressed desire to be interviewed by the expert questioners of the American Institute of Public Opinion. Dr. Gallup, president of the organization, finds that the most common question people ask about the institute's studies is why they themselves have not been interviewed.

He explains that his surveys are based on a careful sampling of opinion from an accurate cross section of the population. The system is very carefully worked out. By the laws of probability, he says, "it will be 120 years before we get around to all the people in the United States."

And by the same laws, alas, the eager, would-be-questioned won't be here for their interview. It's a hard world.

THE CRITICAL YEARS

The middle years may be the hardest. Dr. Elliott C. Cutler of Harvard says: "Elderly persons who have survived the breakdown period, which comes from 40 to 60 years, when there is danger of apoplexy, kidney and heart ailments, are good surgical risks."

Here is reassurance, anyway, for those past 60. Those who have gone that far without any major breaks in their organic system are either pretty tough or have taken pretty good care of themselves, and may have a reasonable expectation of another good decade or two.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

TRAUMATIC NEUROSES

If an individual has been in a motor or other accident, or has been wounded in battle, there is likely to be some physical injury—a broken bone, a cut or scrape, the mark of the bullet or piece of shell—will be found on his body. He will thus get compensation or pension for the physical injury itself, and has an excellent chance also of getting compensation or pension for the shock to his nerves.

What about the individual who has been in a motor accident, has been under shell fire for hours daily for a period of weeks, but has no visible mark of injury on his body? That this individual may be entitled to compensation or pension due to the "shock" is now admitted by the physicians of compensation and pension boards.

What is called traumatic neurosis is where the individual has been through some accident or occurrence which has so affected his nerves that he is unable to do the mental and physical work of which he was capable before the accident or other occurrence. "Trauma" means injury and neurosis a disorder of the nerves yet no real injury to the nerves is present.

In discussing traumatic neurosis in the Medical Clinics of North America. Dr. Abraham Myerson, Boston State Hospital, says:

"In the first place, no emotional shock, no resulting disturbance in mood or mind is valid (holds good) 'legally' as a cause for recovering compensation or damage, unless there has been physical damage accompanying it. Thus, if an individual is tremendously or injuriously frightened by a fire which has taken place near him, unless he has been struck by falling timbers or has stumbled and struck himself, or has been wet down by water, or has inhaled an appreciable and damaging amount of smoke; the individual will not receive compensation even if his nervousness or neurosis prevents him from ever being able to resume his previous occupation."

Now we all know that a shock to one individual without any physical injury can do more damage to his personality and earning ability than a broken leg can do another. We also know that the fact that he is likely to get compensation or pension may cause an individual to "remain disabled."

We must be patient, therefore, with compensation and pension boards because, while they do not have to recognize traumatic neurosis unless evidence of injury is present, nevertheless most of the boards try to be fair.

Send ten cents to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 73, Station O, New York, N. Y., and ask for Dr. Barton's booklet "Neurosis."

Administration May Be Getting Ready to Put on Pressure for CIO-AFL Labor Settlement

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 13.—When a man of the pro-labor philosophy of Senator George Norris of Nebraska says in a published interview that he is "disgusted" with the labor leaders of America for failing to settle the A. F. of L.-C. I. O. controversy and suggests action by Congress on pending amendments to the Wagner Act, it may be taken as a sign that the administration is getting ready to put on the pressure for a settlement of the warfare inside labor's ranks.

The Nebraska Senator does not attempt to say who is at fault but calls attention to recent attacks on the labor board from both the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., and adds that "neither side is satisfied with what the labor board does unless it gets what it wants."

But many critics of the Wagner law feel that any statute which can be stretched one way or the other to suit a pressure group is not a fair statute and that Congress ought to legislate specific standards for the board's guidance.

The public statement by Mr. Norris will occasion considerable surprise because it is not often that he has anything to say in criticism of labor. The incident, moreover, will take on especial significance because only last week President Roosevelt summoned both John L. Lewis and William Green to the White House and talked about the pending controversy between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. up to the present week it may well be that Mr. Roosevelt exerted only the power of personal suggestion but now he may have determined to use tactics open to him for some time but which he doubtless has hesitated to use.

Mr. Lewis, it will be recalled, has carried on a campaign against amendment of the Wagner Act in any particular and against changing the powers of the labor board. The A. F. of L., on the other hand, has been urging a set of amendments which it adopted last year at its annual convention. Then came the investigations, one by the House labor committee and the other by the Senate labor committee. A voluminous record of technical data was built up and filed. Now there's another investigation in the offing by a special House committee headed by Representative Howard Smith of Virginia, which the administration tried unsuccessfully to "purge" in the 1938 election.

The Smith committee has had its investigators at work for several weeks and the plan has been to start hearings soon, after which congress would be asked to pass amendments to the present law. It is well to be that the administration is anxious to avoid the exposures and disclosures which the Smith committee may be planning to make and that a sudden effort has begun to force the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. to get together, failing which the administration itself may take the lead in sponsoring changes in the Wagner law, which amendments could settle the question for instance of which is not an "appropriate" unit as between craft and industrial unionism.

The labor board has already set forth some general principles, but these have not been applied the same way in every case. But a specific statute giving the labor board instructions on how to ascertain the "appropriate unit" for collective bargaining may do away with much of the controversy between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. because the board would have its discretion narrowed, if not taken away altogether.

If the President had cared to say the word any time earlier this year, congress would have acted on the pending amendments to the Wagner law. So long as the C. I. O. and the White House were working peacefully together, the action on amendments demanded by the A. F. of L. was in various ways squelched. Congressional committees showed no inclination to bring the amendments to the floor, in fact the view was held by pro-administration members that any administration suggested change was trying to sabotage the labor vote.

The outburst by Senator Norris is a reflection of the growing uneasiness in Washington that the interline conflict among the labor unions of America is likely to carry over into the 1940 campaign and perhaps become one of the leading causes for the defeat of a "liberal" administration. For it is known that the Republicans are hoping to benefit at the polls next year from the disaffected labor vote.

It is to the interest, therefore, of the Roosevelt administration to produce harmony in labor's ranks and the drive is now to achieve that result. Incidentally even the Pope at Rome in the last few days has made a public address on the need for reconciliation within labor's ranks in America and this, too, may have been prompted by reports from American church leaders on the importance of getting a settlement between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. at the earliest moment.

years ago with a membership of 16. Their names have been lost to posterity. In 1829 prior to the organization of the church Walter B. Crane and George Endicott held a consultation the outcome of which was the formation of the first Sunday School in Rondout.

This school met Sundays in the old school house that stood about on the site of the entrance to the Rondout Creek Bridge. The first church service was held in the school house and at a meeting held on July 9, 1833, Maurice Wurts, Abram Hasbrouck, John Ferguson, George W. Endicott, Edwin H. Bolton, Alexander Snyder and Walter B. Crane were appointed to act as trustees and a building committee for the proposed church.

On August 12, 1833, articles of agreement were made and concluded with Paul Brooks for the erection of a suitable building to be used for a Presbyterian church. The edifice was to be 56 feet long and 40 feet wide with a seating capacity of about 300.

Work was begun at once on the site now occupied by the Temple Emanuel on Abel street, and on October 8, 1833, the cornerstone of the church was laid, and on June 19, 1834, the church was dedicated.

For 40 years services were held in the church and as the congregation increased in numbers it was finally decided to erect a new church, and a building committee composed of Edward Tompkins, David B. Abbey, Charles Bray, Walter B. Crane, Abel A. Crosby, Roland Otis, James McCausland and the pastor, the Rev. Edward D. Ledyard, were named.

Lawrence B. Valk, an architect of New York city, was engaged and drew the plans for the present church, and the contract for its erection was awarded to Henry W. Otis, a mason, and Henry Palen, a carpenter, both of this city.

The estimated cost was $44,000, but the actual cost, owing to some changes in the plan, was $51,280. The cornerstone was laid June 4, 1873, just 66 years ago.

Pastors of the Church Since its organization the church has been served by the following pastors:

1833-35—Rev. John Mason.
1836-39—Rev. William Reilly.
1839-42—Rev. James W. Sayre.
1842-47—Rev. John H. Carle.
1847-61—Rev. Benjamin T. Phillips.

1862-74—Rev. Edward D. Ledyard.
1874-82—Rev. Isaac Clark.
1882-90—Rev. Cornelius Stowitts.
1900-01—Rev. Samuel Banks Nelson.
1901-31—Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis.
1932-38—Rev. James N. Armstrong, Jr.
1939—Rev. D. Linton Doherty.

Longest Pastorate The Rev. Dr. Ellis served the church as its pastor during the years of the World War when 30 of the young men of the church served in the military and naval forces of their country, and the church chapel was the headquarters of the local Red Cross in that section of the city and thousands of bandages and other hospital material were turned out and forwarded to the front.

Dr. Ellis served the church as its pastor for a longer period than any other minister in the history of the church, and under his leadership the church was kept in the forefront of the religious life of Kingston.

Dr. Ellis was a man of keen intellect and was considered one of the most able men in the Presbyterian ministry of the North River. During the more than a quarter century that he served the local church he was active in advancing the cause of Christianity in the city. It was during his ministry that the church was freed of debt, and many improvements made to the church property.

The present pastor of the church, the Rev. D. Linton Doherty, was installed in May of this year.

Christian Education Given As Need of World by Pope

Vatican City, Nov. 13 (UP via radio).—Pope Pius XII, speaking today by radio to the people of the United States, said "the Christian education" of youth was never "more vital or important than it is today."

The pontiff spoke on the occasion of the 50th anniversary celebration of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., from his private studio. He talked approximately seven minutes.

The text of Pope Pius XII's radio address, as transcribed by the National Broadcasting Company, follows:

It is with a heart full of warmth and affection, beloved sons of the United States of America, that we address this message to you, telling of our desire to have a part in the golden jubilee celebration of your magnificent Catholic university.

Our pleasure is all the deeper and the more intimate for the fact that we have had the good fortune to see with our own eyes, although there for only a short time, the great work you have accomplished for the glory of God and the welfare of your country.

Founded in 1863 by the bishops of the United States, during the pontificate of that great patron of studies, Pope Leo XIII, your young university, full of vigor and promise, took its place in that long line of the most distinguished and venerable universities of the past, and following their example in its adherence to the purest traditions of Christian thought, it attained such remarkable success that it was justly praised by our predecessors as happy memory, as a fertile ground for Catholic counsel in the United States.

Genuinely Happy We are genuinely happy to make that praise our own, trusting that in these terrible days, it may encourage and strengthen you to pursue the noble but arduous mission which the university fulfills. The Christian education of youth was never of more decisive or vital importance than it is today, when we are faced with the bewildering errors of nationalism.

opinion by Justice McReynolds said, "a state may absolutely prohibit the manufacture of intoxicants, their transportation, sale or possession, irrespective of when or where produced or obtained, or the use to which they are to be put."

Further, she may adopt measures reasonably appropriate to effectuate these prohibitions and exercise full police authority in respect to them."

Specifically, the opinion held constitutional provisions of the 1938 Kentucky alcoholic beverage control law which prohibit transportation of distilled spirits or wine by trucks unless a license as a common carrier has been obtained.

In brief order, the tribunal held that Atlanta "has no standing to maintain the suit."

It affirmed a judgment against the city by the federal district court for the District of Columbia. Atlanta had contended that price fixing provisions of the legislation, to be placed in effect soon, would require it to pay a higher price for coal and that this would be an unconstitutional interference with the performance of "essential government functions."

Stops Argument When the case came before the court on November 7, Chief Justice Hughes stopped argument after he and his associates had expressed doubt that the tribunal would have jurisdiction until the city was actually damaged by the legislation.

The law, intended to stabilize the bituminous coal industry, was passed as a substitute for the 1935 Guffey act declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The complaint in the Manton case alleged that Judge Manton, then senior member of the circuit court, was subordinated from acting on the litigation because of acceptance of bribes totaling about $50,000 over a period of several years.

Manton since has been convicted on a charge of conspiracy to sell judicial favors. He was sentenced to two years in a federal penitentiary and fined $10,000.

Reargument of the litigation, involving a patent dispute over cigarette lighters, was ordered after Art Metal Works, Inc., of New York, contended there was testimony concerning the Manton trial that he had received a series of bribes from the Evans Case Company of North Attleboro, Mass., to influence his decision.

Manton wrote the opinion holding that a lighter manufactured by and the Central Hudson emergency truck and crew responded to calls for assistance.

According to the police the youth after wedging the kitchen door tight by placing the back of a chair under the doorknob had turned on the radio and then opened four gas jets in the kitchen stove to flood the room with illuminating gas. Apparently, the police say, the youth had seated himself in a chair, after turning on the gas, and then placed his feet up on another chair, but before being overcome by the gas he had evidently changed his mind and made an attempt to reach the kitchen door and fallen unconscious to the floor.

The police believe that Locke's attempt to end his life was due to despondency. About two weeks ago the youth was arrested by the police on a charge of robbing Freer's restaurant on central Broadway, and was held to await grand jury action on a charge of third degree burglary. He is free from jail on bail.

Pleads Innocent Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 13 (UP).—David L. Lawrence, Pennsylvania Democratic chairman, pleaded innocent today to charges of blackmail and selection of a jury was begun for the third in a series of trials resulting from a grand jury investigation of charges brought against several prominent Democrats a year ago.

PAVE ALL STREETS WITH CONCRETE!

8 good reasons why—

- 1 You want a pavement that requires the minimum of maintenance which must be done at city expense.
- 2 Concrete is quiet. It greatly reduces the tire rumble set up by rapidly moving vehicles.
- 3 Traffic markers are built-in. Joints running the length of the pavement serve as lane markers without costly and impermanent stripe painting.
- 4 Every street demands a gritty, non-skid surface for the protection of motorists and pedestrians.
- 5 At night you need a pavement with high visibility. Safety also calls for a pavement that is free from chuck holes, ruts and bumps... and stays that way with minimum maintenance.
- 6 Concrete pavement drains quickly... it is easily cleaned and stays clean... no depressions to catch dirt.
- 7 You want a pavement that makes the whole neighborhood look modern, prosperous, attractive.
- 8 Concrete... and only concrete... completely meets all of these specifications.

YESTERDAY: A check-up reveals that the letter dated after Murchison's disappearance was sent to Chicago General Delivery in a larger envelope, held, then taken out and mailed to Mrs. Murchison. Duncan asks Michael why he is being followed.

Chapter 32

Duncan's Story

"I'd better start at the beginning," Duncan said. "It might be better."

"It sounds utterly fantastic. That's one of the reasons why I haven't confided in you before. You must believe me, it was like this—when my brother told me he was going, he said too that he had a very definite reason for leaving his wife as he did. He said—well, it wasn't what he said particularly. We needn't go into that. But he did tell me that he was leaving something for me, the only thing of real value that he possessed. He said he wouldn't want it where he was going, and he didn't want his wife to have it. He said he'd put it away in a safe place until he decided just what he wanted to do, and when he wanted to go, and then if he made up his mind very suddenly, I could go and get it. It sounds foolish, until you think it over. You might say, why didn't he give it to me then? Well, because he didn't have it then. He couldn't get it. She—Marie—had it, and she wouldn't give it up. She said it belonged to her."

"May we know what this thing was, Mr. Murchison?"

"Yes. It was a diamond necklace. He looked at Michael unhappily and made a hopeless gesture with his hand. "I know it sounds most unreasonable," he said. "It was mentioned that night at Deane's. I don't suppose any of you noticed. Marie said she'd never had a diamond necklace, it was only one made of brilliants. That is not true. When she said that I knew for sure that he'd gotten it away from her at last, and put it away for me."

"Why didn't he put it in a safety deposit vault for you?" Michael asked quietly.

Duncan put a hand over his eyes. "I knew you'd ask that," he answered. "Don't you see why? Because—even if he left me the key to the vault—the transaction of hiring a vault might be traced. The question would arise—how did the key come to be in my possession? Unless he left a signed paper to say that the diamonds were mine, I might be accused of stealing from him. He didn't want to leave that paper. He wanted to drop out. And he was afraid, too, that she would discover about the vault and have her lawyers attach the contents in her name. I may as well say right now that it might just be possible for her to prove that the diamonds are hers, rather, were at one time given to her."

"They were hers then? She had a right to them?"

"No. This is the part I am not at liberty to explain. It wouldn't be fair to tell a certain person. But that necklace—it was worth over fifty thousand dollars. . . . Edgar paid for it. It took all of his share of my grandfather's money. He didn't want to buy it. . . . but . . . well, we won't go into that. He bought it. His wife always insisted that it was hers, that he gave it to her. His point of view was that he held that family inheritance in trust, to a certain extent, and that if he had no children it was to be mine. I don't want it. I don't need it, but since he wanted me to have the diamonds, and under the circumstances, I'm going to have them. There was a grim set to his jaw. "There'll have to be something arranged for her support," he said. "I have to have a certain person. I suppose. And that raises another point. We discussed that, Edgar and I, and he said he'd leave papers for me which would guide me in that. I don't know of what nature the papers are."

"And what can we do about all this, Mr. Murchison?" Michael asked.

"The Truth!"

DUNCAN looked him in the eye and flushed. He turned to Tuck. "Perhaps you'll remember the first day I came here, after you moved in," he said. "When you had been here only a few days, I came one afternoon and knocked at this door rather than at the front. I had a purpose. I thought I knew where Edgar had left the stones for me, and I wanted to get them. You came in too quickly, and I've only now mustered up enough courage to tell the truth, and ask if I may hunt for them in your presence."

There was a silence. Michael's eyes were on his cigarette. Bunny gazed stonily into the garden. Tuck looked miserably at Duncan Murchison's face.

"Haven't you a key to the house?" she asked. "Couldn't you have come in for the diamonds before we came, when the house was empty?"

"No. I left the morning after Edgar did. I gave my key to Marie then." He turned to Michael. "You will give me permission to look for my property?"

"You say the diamonds and the papers are hidden in the study?"

"I think so."

"Where?"

"Somewhere in the floor. I think I've come to the conclusion that there are loose pegs in the quarry and I imagine it would be near Edgar's desk."

"He told you that?"

"He was rather indefinite, but that is the impression I gathered."

"Do you remember exactly when and where he told you this?"

Duncan considered. "I'm not sure," he said, "but I think we were on the porch here at the time. Why?" He was a little impatient.

"I'm sorry if I appear inquisitive," said Michael as if he were not in the least sorry. "Do you mind telling me what Miss Lissey said to you yesterday afternoon?"

At once the familiar dark sullen look came over Murchison's face. "Why do you ask me that?"

"I can explain, but I don't care to at the present moment. Will you tell me?"

"No, I will not. It was in connection with a subject I do not care to discuss."

"Oh, very well," Michael sighed. He crushed out his cigarette, and went into the study. He came out in a moment with the gray tin box in his hands. "It will save you a little trouble," he said lightly. "I give this to you now. We found it some time ago. Not in the floor, but in the cold-air register. Would you say it held what your brother promised you?"

Duncan looked at it eagerly. "I should certainly be inclined to think so," he replied. "But it's been opened! Don't you know what's in it?"

"Oh, yes," Michael answered. "Sorry if you don't approve. We had to, you know."

Practical Joke?

DUNCAN did not answer. He took the box, set it on his knee, and lifted the lid. Inside were the three pebbles, once said to be wrapped in the little pieces of paper, and beneath them the sheaf of letters.

Duncan stared at the contents of the box in amazement. "They aren't diamonds!" he said. He picked up a pebble and unwrapped it. He stared at it as it lay in his hand.

"No," Michael said. "They don't seem to be, do they?"

"What have you done with them?" Duncan demanded angrily. "Is this some practical joke, Forrester?"

"No. I will take my oath that the box contains exactly what it did when we found it. My wife and Miss Temple will support me in that statement."

Duncan looked at Bunny. "That is quite true," she said very quietly.

He pushed the pebbles to one side, and seized the sheaf of papers. He glanced at the letter at the top of the pile. His face crimsoned.

"You read these?" he asked. Their silence answered him.

He stood up and shut the lid of the tin box. "Thank you very much for restoring to me my property," he said stiffly.

"You're quite welcome," said Michael in an easy conversational tone, and went straight on. "I suppose you know that Miss Lissey was murdered? It wasn't heart failure as was given out?"

The crimson in the young man's face reddened swiftly. He stared at Michael with horrified eyes.

"Murdered?" he repeated. "Murdered?"

Duncan left. The two Forresters and Tuck still sat on the sun porch. Michael picked up his tea-cup and sipped at his tea. He waited.

"Oh Michael, Michael," Tuck waited as soon as Duncan was through the gate. "Why were you so beastly to him? So dreadful?"

"Was I, honey? Please give me another lump of sugar."

"Michael," said Bunny quietly, "are you going to condemn Duncan without asking him for his side of the story—just because of what Miss Lissey said?"

He set down the cup after a moment and looked at her. "If you must have that question answered, use your head, child. That story he told; does it hold water in your eyes? It sounded like nothing but a string of melodramatic nothings to me. Not very well hitched together. I don't think he really made it up himself, or it would have strung along a lot more smoothly."

"Well—we thought there were diamonds in the tin box, didn't we, before we opened it?"

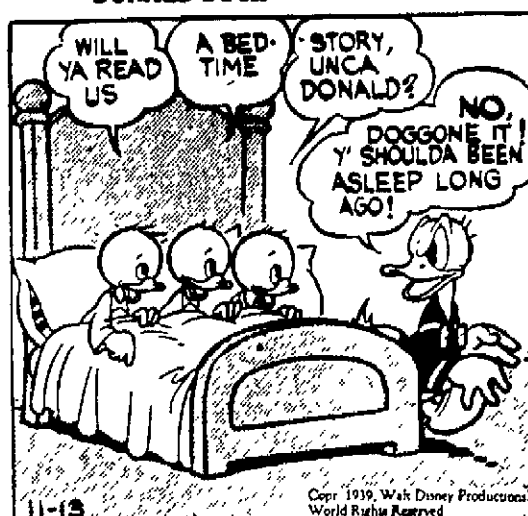

"So did he. If there had been diamonds in it, they'd have been well worth the trouble of concocting . . . or memorizing . . . a story like that, wouldn't they?"

Bunny did not answer him. She thought it over.

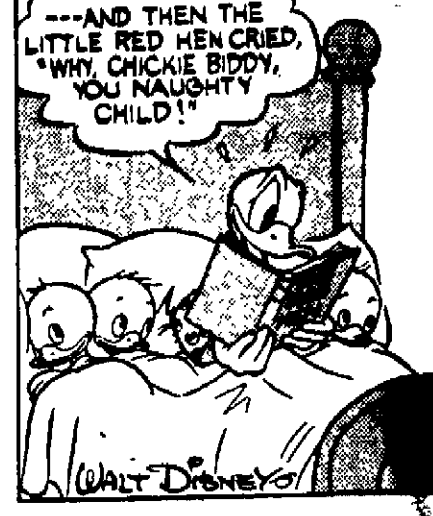

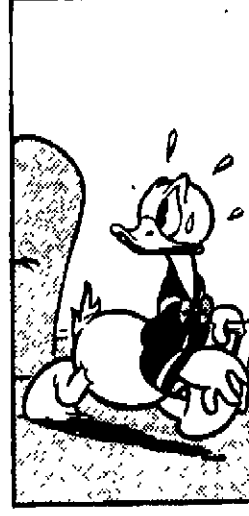

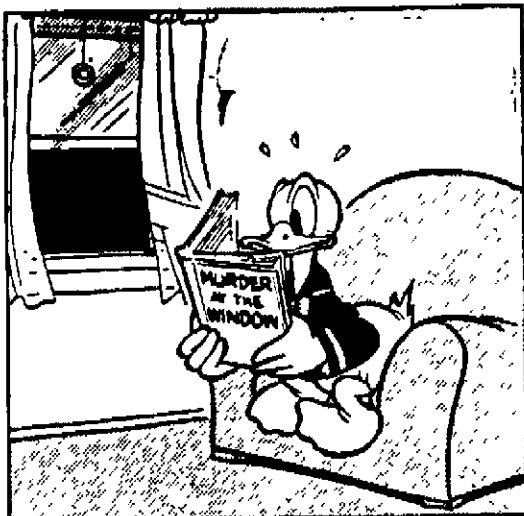

"Michael, you're mistaken for once," said Tuck. "Miss Lissey hadn't finished her story and anyway she might have been wrong. Duncan's a nice boy if there ever was one, and he's telling the truth. If he were telling a lie it would sound better, like your excuses when you can't come home to dinner."

A man dashed into the fire station. He was tremendously excited and burst out with:

Man—I'm sorry to interrupt you, but my wife has disappeared. Fireman (looking up)—That's too bad, but why tell us firemen? Why not notify the police?

Man (shaking his head)—I don't dare tell the police. I told them the last time she disappeared—and they went out and found her.

A Secret

A prominent business man once said that the only reason he knew for his success was that he always did what he was paid to do, and then some. . . . Those three words, "and then some," were the secret of his success, even though he may not have realized it. . . . Do you?

Mrs. Simms—My dear, never marry anyone connected with the editorial office of a magazine or newspaper.

Miss Debb—Why not?

Mrs. Simms—I married one and every night he brings home a big bundle of papers from all over the country. I nearly go crazy looking at the bargains advertised in stores hundreds and thousands of miles away.

If you ask a farmer what a "Farm Program" is he will tell you it's worth about 16 hours a day.

Kaltenborn to Speak
Heron Thursday

H. V. KALTENBORN

There are probably few Americans today who have not heard of Hans Von Kaltenborn, who will speak in the high school auditorium here Thursday evening at 8:30. Few, however, know what he looks like, where he lives, or what kind of a person he is. He is more famous as a voice than he is as a personality. Often he has traveled for days on trains and boats, unrecognized until he spoke. His is a peculiar kind of fame, but one which is familiar to many radio personalities.

In appearance Kaltenborn is said to look like a college professor. He is just under six feet tall, broad shouldered, ruddy, white haired and athletic, with a warm handclasp and a smile one remembers.

His life has been characterized by its courage in emergency and its abiding curiosity. A great deal of Mr. Kaltenborn's radio prestige has been built up not merely by the accuracy of his information, but by the truth of his predictions.

Kaltenborn can speak four languages, English, French, German and Spanish, and best of all, he can speak all of them extemporaneously. The so-called "ad lib" style is his strongest forte.

Kaltenborn comes from German stock. His father, a one-time Hessian guardsman, imbued the boy with his love of adventure. At 8 years of age he was initiated into public speaking by reciting "The Blind King" before a large audience in Milwaukee, Wis. At 14 he left school and worked for his father at $3 a week. Later he joined a lumber crew in the Wisconsin woods.

At 17 he heard William Jennings Bryan's famous "Cross of Gold" speech and was so fired by its oratory that he spent a summer campaigning for Bryan. At 21 he started on his international career when as a reporter on his home town paper, local news seemed dull compared to the splendors of Paris and the Exposition of 1900. At 24, he decided he didn't have enough education, so, with characteristic zeal, he enrolled in Harvard as a special student. Kaltenborn tutored young Vincent Astor. Every summer thereafter he struck out for points unknown. He was the first American journalist to secure an interview with Mussolini on the Duce's Ethiopian adventure. He had repeated interviews with Hitler and is one of the few Americans to have had a heart-to-heart talk with General Chiang Kai-shek.

Mr. Kaltenborn will speak on

Fashions may come and go, but here's one dress that will keep apart from changing fancies. You'll be wearing slenderizing Pattern 9200 next season too, for Marian Martin has designed it with classic simplicity. Your front waistline is broken up by a long seam (perhaps button-trimmed), and by side-front skirt panels. And the side waist seams are high, leaving waist and hips smoothly slim. Tie your sash in front or in back, or just indicate the front waist with buttons. You'll find the revers-and-bow neck becoming, especially in contrast. A low V-neck would be graceful too. The shoulders are softly gathered or shirred; the sleeves long or short.

Pattern 9200 may be ordered only in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4½ yards 39 inch fabric. Send FIFTY CENTS in cash for this MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and STYLE NUMBER.

Advice About Popularity

Dear Mrs. Post: I am very unhappy because it seems to me I have everything to make me popular here in this co-ed college but I don't seem able to make the grade—either with the men students or with other girls. I can't understand. I am good-looking; my clothes are better than those of most of the other girls; my family is very prominent in the city I come from; my father is in fact a musical celebrity. I am used to meeting celebrities that come to our house. I have also had many advantages. I have had a thorough musical training, although I have unfortunately not inherited my father's talent. I speak French and German and Italian and certainly I have good manners. But something is wrong here. Surely these qualities which I can count as mine ought to have made me sought after. Well! I'm not. When I first came and they heard my name my fellow students seemed impressed. But now they take no notice of me. Can you tell me what's wrong?

Answer: I think you are taking your advantages too seriously. You are too much impressed with the celebrity of your father, and his celebrated friends—and of your possessions, too. Isn't that it? You must try to get all this importance out of your mind and get interested in college and your fellow students. Think about them. Show some eagerness to know them. Don't wear clothes much better than theirs; don't let your possessions seem to put you on a different level. Don't push yourself forward; don't, on the other hand, suddenly begin to try to be humble. Rule number one: Forget yourself. Forget the importance of your family at home. In short, do not under any stress of pride be led to display a price tag. Stand on your own feet, not on your father's, and above all, not on his fortune.

Why Wear Black

Dear Mrs. Post: I would like to know why it is wrong for a woman to be married in black. I had intended to wear black and every one seems so shocked that I wondered why it would be such a terrible choice if I happened to like it best.

Answer: This suggestion is shocking because black is associated with the sadness of a funeral. The idea of a bride in black is unsuitable in much the way dressing a little child in black would be unsuitable. I have never seen a baby in black and I have never seen a bride in black. Personally I should not like one better than the other.

Be Sparing With Criticism

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it ever permissible for me to correct the table manners of the older members of my family?

Answer: Correction that has no motive but affection is seldom resented. But criticism without heart is cruel.

The Newburgh Recreations got even with the Yellow Jackets Sunday afternoon when the Wasps went down the river seeking two victories in a row, by smothering them 27-6.

Only for Gil Kelder, the Jackets would have suffered a scoreless defeat, but he saved the day in part with a spectacular 98-yard run for a touchdown.

Smarting under the 6-0 lacing they received from Coach Don Beany's team in the night game for the Knights of Columbus at the municipal stadium, the Reds were ready for revenge yesterday.

Right from the start, the Newburghers began battering the Kingston line and put on an aerial exhibition that was good for sizeable gains.

A Jacket fumble put the Reds in line for their first score early in the opening quarter. Gritman picked up the ball on the Wasps' 30. Fomal went through tackle for five yards and Schimmel dashed around left end on a reverse to cross the pay-off stripe standing up.

Chumas place kicked for the extra point, making the tally 7-0.

Again Chumas figured in the scoring as he passed to Pilus on the Jackets' three yard line. Three attempts failed, but on the fourth Chumas heaved the pigskin to Pilus over the goal line.

On the next kickoff, Kelder took the ball for Kingston and from the two-yard stripe ripped along the sidelines, evading a flock of Red tacklers and carted the ball 98 yards for the lone touchdown.

In the second quarter, Fomal climaxed a 40-yard drive by going over the last white stripe from the three-yard mark for another touchdown. A pass Chumas to J. Thomas was good for 30 and another aerial, Fomal to Schimmel brought the ball into scoring position from the close-up distance. Pilus kicked the extra point.

Newburgh scored its other touchdown for 27 points in the fourth quarter on a 25-yard toss from Chumas to Pilus in the end zone. Chumas's try for the after-touchdown point was good.

Baltimore Runner Wins A.A.U. Title

Yonkers, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP)—Pat Dengis, the transplanted Welshman, who runs 20 miles nearly every night in the year as easily as junior runs to the grocery store, won his 13th marathon in 15 starts yesterday when he captured the National A. A. U. championship for the third time.

Dengis trains for these things by cantering more than 100 miles every week in and around Baltimore where he lives. Just a little bit of fooling around to keep in trim, he'll tell you. But yesterday he wasn't fooling, for in the process of running 67 adversaries bow-legged, he cracked a four-year-old course record and carried his two closest competitors ahead of the last record, too.

The old mark of 2 hours, 38 minutes, 43 seconds was established by John Kelley, of Boston, in 1935, when this event was known simply as the Yankers marathon. Yesterday, Dengis lowered it to 2:33:42, and so bruising was his pace that Gerard Cote, of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, who finished second, was clocked in 2:35:33, and Kelley, himself, checked in at 2:37:08.

An anxious handler drove up alongside Dengis about 15 miles out and asked whether there was anything he wanted. Pat said, "Yeah, a horse." Shortly thereafter, he waved the boys goodbye and finished very much by himself. So he must have been fooling about the horse.

St. Peter's Holy Name Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of St. Peter's Holy Name Society will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in St. Peter's school hall.

The Rev. Stephen Landherr, C.S.S.R., of Mt. St. Alphonsus, Esopus, has been secured to give a talk after the business meeting. Father Landherr's work has been the instruction of deaf mutes and he will relate some of his experiences. Sound films of several sport subjects will be shown and the usual refreshments and games may be enjoyed in the club rooms.

Telephone service between Konstanz and Kreuzlingen and all other communications were cut off shortly before the fire was observed from the Swiss side of the border.

43 Persons Killed

Oppeln, Germany, Nov. 13 (AP)—Forty-three persons were known today to have been killed and 60 injured in a collision between two passenger trains last night between Langleben and Rosengrund. The train were crowded with Sunday traffic. The accident was believed to have been caused by the negligence of a switchman who ran the two trains onto the same track.

IOWA TOPPLES NOTRE DAME, 7 TO 6

Notre Dame fell from the unbeaten class when it lost at Iowa City, Ia., to Iowa University. Here Joe Thesing (33), Notre Dame fullback, lugs the ball for a short gain in the first quarter, only to meet determined opposition. Bruno Andruska (14), Iowa center, is rushing in to make the tackle. Dick Evans (35), and Mike Enich (top 33) are other Iowa players who helped trim the Irish, 7 to 6.

Grid Power Shifts to Midland College Sector

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
New York, Nov. 13 (AP)—It appears likely that more things will be settled definitely about college football teams next Saturday than on any one day all this season.

The center of football power, which has been moving steadily southward this year, shifted suddenly toward the midlands last week-end with Oklahoma and Missouri in the leading roles. Decisive games in all quarters this week should either give some definite sign as to where that center will wind up or at least show which teams will have a hand in the final decision.

The eliminational Notre Dame and Catholic University from the unbeaten and untied list were only incidents in the shift of power, which saw Oklahoma, Missouri, Iowa, Ohio State, Georgia Tech, Clemson and Santa Clara move up to threaten the powers that be.

It was Ohio, which stopped a great Irish winning streak back in 1921, that did the trick again Saturday by a 7 to 6 count, as Nile Kinnick put on a great show in his fifth consecutive 60-minute game. Catholic U. was a real upset victim, losing 39-13 to little St. Anselm.

These defeats reduced the list of unbeaten and untied leaders to Cornell, Duquesne, Texas A. & M., and Tennessee, with San Jose State of California, winner of ten straight, and Colorado Mines thrown in for good measure. Tied but undefeated are Georgetown, Rutgers, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Tulane, Richmond, Southern California and U. C. L. A. They're mostly looking better with every game, but so are a lot of one-beaten teams. Duke, Mississippi, Baylor and even Southern Methodist might be added to this list although they didn't prove it last week.

This week's program of decisive battles in various sections shapes up, briefly, something like this:

East: Cornell-Dartmouth is this week's biggest eastern game by all odds. Cornell, sharing with Duquesne, the unbeaten-untied ranking in the east, hasn't added to its stature much in two successive close calls. The Big Red team just did skim by Colgate, 14-12, after belting the Red Raiders all over the lot in the first half. Dartmouth took its first defeat, 9-7, at Princeton's hands. Both are aiming to come back to the "Ivy League" title and as natural rivals will have a double incentive. Duquesne takes the week off after its 7-0 win over North Carolina State at Raleigh. Georgetown, seeking its second straight undefeated season, follows its 20-0 win over Maryland with an encounter with deflated New York University, 20-7 victim of Missouri. Holy Cross, like Boston College back among the eastern leaders despite an early-season interseasonal loss, whipped Temple 14-0 and faces Carnegie Tech, 6-0 victim of Pitt. Army, routed 15-0 by Harvard, plays Penn State.

The Princeton-Yale rivalry, oldest continuous series in football, takes its usual leading spot even though the Elis were only good enough to tie the Brown 14-14.

In the intersectional line, Pitt takes on Nebraska; Pennsylvania, 10-0 upset victim of Penn State, meets Michigan. Fordham, 13-0 winner over Indiana, has its annual tussle with St. Mary's; Columbia, which beat Navy 19-13, bumps into the mighty Tulane team which defeated Alabama 13-0.

South: If the Southern Conference title isn't decided by this week's Duke-North Carolina game, it probably never will be, for Clemson and Richmond both have chances to tie the survivor. Though Duke was beaten by Pitt and Carolina tied by Tulane, they have clean records in the conference. The Blue Devils warmed up for the crucial contest by beating Virginia Military 20-7 while the Tar Heels whipped Davidson 32-0.

Clemson, 20-7 winner over Wake Forest, takes on Southwestern of Tennessee in a breathery while Richmond, after stopping Virginia Tech 13-0, meets Hampden-Sydney. Only other conference games are Maryland-V. M. I. and North Carolina State-Furman.

Tennessee, whose biggest gun, George Cafego, was hurt in a 34-0 rout of the Citadel, returns to Southeastern Conference competition against Vanderbilt, which finally broke into the winning column by beating Sewanee 25-7. Georgia Tech, which moved into a tie for the conference lead with Tennessee and Tulane by beating Kentucky 13-6, encounters the tough Alabama team and Auburn, 10-0 intersectional winner over Villanova, meets Louisiana State in other conference tilts.

Mid-west: The week's gridiron "natural" is Oklahoma vs. Missouri, the game that likely will settle the Big Six championship and bring the winner a flock of bowl invitations. The Sooners, tied only by Southern Methodist, conquered Kansas State 13-10 last week to tie Missouri for the conference lead. They're rated about even despite Missouri's early-season loss to Ohio State, and if Oklahoma isn't one of the best teams in the country it's up to passing Paul Christman and his Tigers to prove it. Kansas State-Iowa State is the other conference pairing while Kansas plays George Washington.

There's no way of deciding the Big Ten title without considering Ohio State, which had only a light workout in beating Chicago

61-0. The Buckeyes' next opponent is Illinois, whose Jimmy Smith led the way to a 7-0 victory over Wisconsin. Iowa, very much in the picture after that Notre Dame victory, meets Minnesota, which recovered its old-time form to wallop Michigan 20-7. Notre Dame, hardly disgraced, starts its comeback against Northwestern, 3-0 victim of Purdue.

Southwest: The Southwest Conference had its "biggest" game with Texas A. and M. edging out Southern Methodist 6-2 in a rain-drenched thriller. From here in the Aggies shouldn't have many troubles although Rice, often beaten and held to a 12-12 tie by Arkansas, is in a good spot to spring an upset Saturday. S. M. U. still rated next-best in the loop, plays Arkansas at Fayetteville Friday while Baylor, second in the standing after its 20-0 win over Texas, plays Centenary in a non-conference game. Texas plays Christian, 16-0 winner over Tulsa. The southwest's leading intersectional game pits Texas Tech, which played a scoreless tie with Centenary, against Marquette, 21-2 winner over Iowa State.

Pacific coast: Southern California forged to the front in the Pacific Coast Conference by whipping Stanford 33-0 while U. C. L. A. was idle. This week it's the Uclans' turn to show their strength as they play Santa Clara, which beat Michigan State 6-0 for its third straight major victory.

RAN THE WRONG WAY—BUT MADE TOUCHDOWN

This unusual football picture shows a ball carrier apparently heading for the wrong goal line. While his astonished teammates watched, Roy Turner (23), of Muskingum College, found himself headed the wrong way and hemmed in by four Heidelberg College tacklers, in game at New Concord, O. But, as dotted line indicates, he eluded them and got straightened out—then went on to score a touchdown. Muskingum won 55 to 0.

Some Passes

Abilene, Tex., Nov. 13 (AP)—Hardin-Simmons and West Texas State football teams threw 76 passes. Herchel Schooley, Hardin-Simmons publicity director, says he can't find this ever was surpassed. Hardin-Simmons won 18-13. Foster Watkins of West Texas pitched 37 passes, including two touchdowns, while Owen Goodnight and L. B. Russell of the Cowboys completed 19 out of 39. All five touchdowns were directly the result of passes.

Soldier Monument Deed Given Over By Women's Club

With appropriate ceremonies the Women's Club of Rosendale on Saturday afternoon celebrated Armistice Day by presenting to the village the deed to the Soldiers' Memorial Monument which stands in the village.

Past Commander Eugene A. Freer of Kingston Post of the American Legion, was the principal speaker at the ceremonies. He said:

We shall fight for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts: for democracy—for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their government.

These immortal words spoken by Woodrow Wilson on April 2, 1917, sent us into war. For 18 months every activity of the nation was directed towards the single goal—victory. Four million men offered their bodies. Other millions offered their time, their energies, and their fortunes for the one purpose. Mothers gave their sons, children gave their fathers, that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

On November 11, 1918, we achieved that victory with the war toll in lives and wealth of 130,494 dead and wealth depleted to the amount of $32,080,266,968. Today, 21 years later, we pause to give honor and reverence to those men who gave their all.

You in this community who have gathered here in solemn tribute for the purpose of honoring these brave men are to be congratulated. It is fitting and truly appropriate that here, today, we gather together and bind our hearts in union for the purpose of a lasting memorial for what these sons, husbands and fathers did.

This memorial for generations to come will speak out its true words. Many people will view it, many relatives will pause. Many days are to come when these honored dead, by this memorial will be held in the hearts of those who pause, and surely, I know, will quietly say—"This must not happen again."

And through this memorial as we stand here in this community will have a great bearing on you people as to what war really is.

God forbid that this great nation of ours ever goes to war again. No nation or group of nations was gained by the World War. There was nothing achieved by any nation to encourage war as the future policy of any great nation. So, in the struggles of mankind with the forces of hate, jealousy and greed, running rampant today, why not, I ask you, can't we take ourselves to do and ask ourselves to give tolerance, patience and the honest love for our fellowman.

This memorial today is for the love of mankind—for the loyalty to brotherhood, for the spirit that it will commemorate to those people who have banded together unselfishly to make this occasion possible.

Do you people today realize that this great country of ours is but 150 years old, and through the formation of it, our constitution reads—"We the people, and then as time goes on in the history making part of this nation we find ourselves saying—"I pledge allegiance to the flag, and the last great history making words of meaning is the beginning of the preamble of the constitution of the American Legion—for God and country we associate ourselves together. In all three of these history making words, we find ourselves as peoples of these United States trusting in one another, seeking unity, seeking freedom. We declare that through these words we shall not perish as a nation.

My mind flashes back to the landing of the Pilgrims. We find that they landed on a firm foundation of rock and began settling this country on firm principles of what was right. Principles of religious freedom. How can we charge you—have a religion, make your religion your comforter, build your religion on this same foundation that the Pilgrims did, that's why this country never failed, that's why it never will.

In closing, may I thank the committee in charge for giving me the privilege of being here today. Your deeds will be rewarded. I know by the spirit of this memorial.

It is a grand acknowledgment of your appreciation of what these brave men did for. And to these honored dead and to the World War veterans, may I quote the glorious words from the preamble and constitution of the American Legion:

For God and country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred percent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the great war; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the Master of Might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

Service League Of Church Meets

The Service League of the Elmhurst Street Presbyterian Church held its regular monthly meeting in the ladies' parlor of the Ramsey Memorial Building Tuesday afternoon with the largest attendance since activities were resumed in September.

The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. C. F. Schenman. Routine business was transacted and plans made for future activities. The members who are working on the Christmas gift committee reported meeting regularly to make the various articles which will be placed on sale at a Christmas bazaar to be held next month. Orders are being taken now and there have been many advance sales made. In addition to the aprons, fancy articles and hand-made pieces there will be available jewelry and other metal craft.

Following the business meeting the league enjoyed the first of six periods during which the book "Woman and the Way" will be taken up under the leadership of Mrs. W. J. McVey. This book, which is a story of what women in all parts of the world are accomplishing, was written by Madame Chiang Kai-Shek, wife of the head of the Chinese republic. The introduction was read at this meeting and at five subsequent meetings various portions of the book will be reviewed and discussed.

A musical program was then enjoyed, during which Miss Vivian Swart, a member of the choir and one of the church's accomplished young musicians, gave excellent interpretations of the Berceuse from Jocelyn, and Valse Chromatique by Godard.

No Bid Expected For Permit to Run Meat Packing Firm

At the health department office today it was stated that it was not expected that an application would be made at the monthly meeting of the health board for a permit to operate a meat packing concern in the former Hauck brewery, as the concern that was considering the plant had decided not to locate in Kingston.

Members of the health board had been expected to visit the plant previous to the meeting but the inspection had been called off when it was learned that the concern had decided not to locate here.

That concern that was considering the plant had planned to kill, dress and pack chickens in cans as well as other meat products. At the present time the concern is located in New York city.
